About The Club & Guest House

An architectural icon — in the heart of the UC Santa Barbara campus

Since its historic construction in 1968 by architect Charles W. Moore and associate, William Turnbull, Jr., The Club & Guest House has endured as the distinguished center on campus for faculty, visiting scholars, and notable visitors from all over the world. The tranquil lagoon side location is spectacular and creates the perfect setting for inspiration and expanding possibilities.

The Lancaster Society is named for Louis and Winifred Lancaster, civic-minded philanthropists who helped establish the UC Santa Barbara Foundation and worked tirelessly to build meaningful bridges between the university and the larger community.

Their vision is sustained through the loyal generosity of today's members of the Lancaster Society. Through their enduring commitment and leadership, these remarkable philanthropists have helped build the university's world-class reputation for teaching, research, and public service.
